EXPLORE WITH NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC-LINDBLAD EXPEDITIONS

BECAUSE HOW YOU SEE IT MATTERS

A LEGACY OF EXCELLENCE

An exclusive collaboration with National Geographic that blends their legendary spirit of exploration with Lindblad Expeditions' unmatched 50+ years of expedition heritage.

One of the most experienced teams in the industry—veteran captains, seasoned guides and National Geographic Experts,* with 110+ team members contributing a decade or more of fleet experience.

Rigorous safety protocols, tested and trusted in the world's most remote regions.

*Available on select departures.

SEE MORE. LEARN MORE. DO MORE.

All activities and excursions are included, with options for every pace and skill level.

Ideal for multi-generational travel, with a range of activities and the exclusive National Geographic Explorers-in-Training program.*

Photography instruction from National Geographic photographers* and certified photo experts—so you return home with your best photos.

SHIPS BUILT FOR AWE

The largest and most versatile fleet in expedition cruising: 22 small ships built to explore beyond the reach of large cruise ships.

An award-winning culinary program that emphasizes destination-inspired cuisine and fresh, locally sourced ingredients.

PIONEERING RESPONSIBLE EXPLORATION

Committed to preserving the natural and cultural heritage of your destination through the Lindblad Expeditions-National Geographic Fund.

Continuously minimizing the fleet's environmental footprint through advanced technologies and best-in-class practices.

ALL-INCLUSIVE FOR EXCEPTIONAL VALUE AND CONVENIENCE

From excursions and engaging talks to meals, onboard amenities, airport transfers, Wi-Fi and much more.

SHIPS BUILT FOR AWE

National Geographic-Lindblad Expeditions operates three ships in Baja California during the winter whale migration and one ship in Channel Islands National Park. Each vessel was specially designed to explore these waters, with shallow drafts that bring you through narrow waterways so you can get closer than you ever imagined to the region's dazzling spectacle of marine life.

NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC VENTURE

The 50-cabin National Geographic Venture is modern, clean-lined and exceptionally maneuverable, able to take you to the remote beaches and quiet coves of this fascinating wilderness.

Twin Zodiac boarding platforms allow for quick disembarkation so you can spend more time exploring, while kayaks and paddleboards let you glide into secluded inlets for up-close discovery. For underwater adventures, each guest is outfitted with a full complement of snorkeling gear.

Tiered decks give every traveler a clear view of the regions' charismatic marine mammals, and amenities include a partially covered sundeck, a fitness center and a library and lounge with a full-service bar. Meals are inspired by regional fare, giving you a taste of Baja California's wild bounty with every bite.

NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC SEA BIRD & NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC SEA LION

Sister ships National Geographic Sea Bird and National Geographic Sea Lion accommodate just 62 guests in 31 outside cabins. Their remarkably shallow drafts make them the only expedition ships in Baja California that can anchor in Magdalena Bay, giving guests unparalleled access to one of the region's most active gray whale nurseries.

Enjoy days filled with kayaking, paddleboarding and hiking where the desert meets the sea, capped off with relaxing evenings spent amid inviting onboard spaces that foster a unique camaraderie imbued with the spirit of shared discovery.

Read a book from the library, chat with the captain on the open Bridge or simply take a seat on the sundeck and watch the scenery go by. Meals are served in the dining room at a single seating with unassigned tables for easy mingling, and menus feature fresh ingredients inspired by your wild surroundings.

A DAY IN THE LIFE

EXPLORING BAJA CALIFORNIA

Sailing Baja California is akin to setting out on a marine safari, where dolphins, humpbacks and gray whales vie for your attention, and snorkeling excursions give you a closer look at sea lions and schooling fish. No two days here are alike, but here's a glimpse of what you might encounter in "the world's aquarium."

Early Risers: The Green Flash

With clear desert skies and vast ocean views, Baja California is the ideal place to witness the green flash, a rare optical phenomenon where the sun takes on a greenish tinge just before appearing—or disappearing—over the horizon. Nearly every morning, a naturalist is posted up on the bow, helping travelers catch the exact moment the flash might fill the sky.

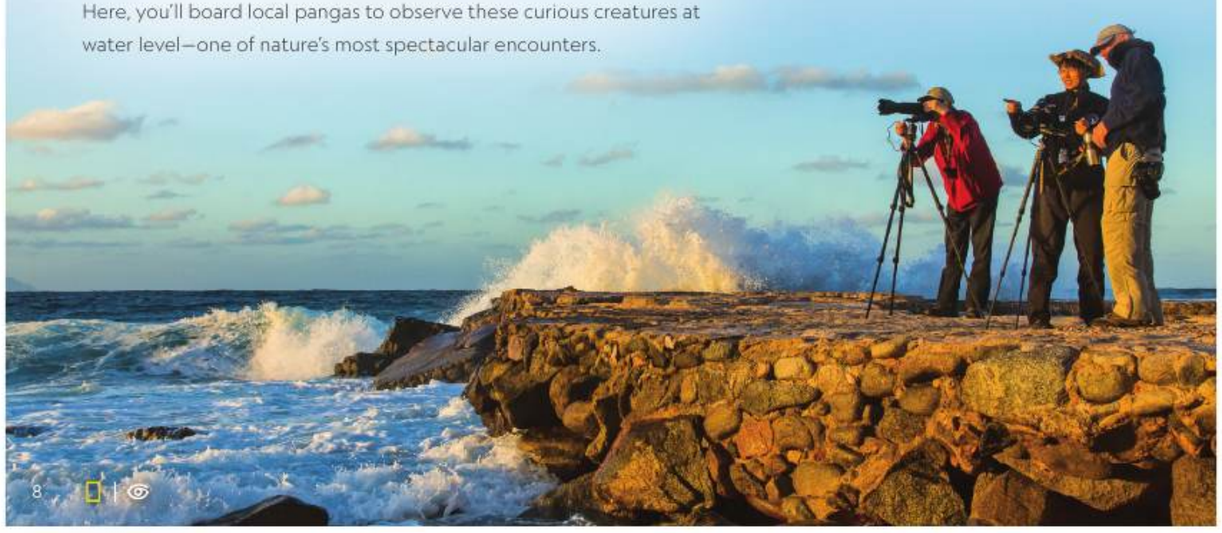

Breakfast With Blue Whales

Marine mammals are most active in the morning, and ship spotters work through breakfast so you don't miss a sighting. If they spot a blue whale or other charismatic megafauna, the dining staff happily pauses service for travelers who want to take a look.

Morning Excursion: The World Beneath the Waves

Dive into Baja California's sapphire seas to view its creatures up close, snorkeling with sea lions and schools of jackfish in marine conservation areas. In the sheltered lagoons of the Pacific Coast, more than 20,000 gray whales gather in the winter to give birth and raise their young. Here, you'll board local pangas to observe these curious creatures at water level—one of nature's most spectacular encounters.

Downtime: Whales, Whales, Everywhere

Every winter, the waters surrounding the Baja California peninsula teem with cetaceans—from fin whales to humpbacks and California grays. Whale watching is always an option during the daylight hours, often turning quiet stretches at sea into some of the most exciting moments of your expedition.

Lunch Is Served

Ship chefs use fresh, local ingredients whenever possible, including sustainably caught fish and desert produce from the Baja California peninsula. Don't miss the fresh ceviche or fish tacos.

Afternoon Excursion: Exploring Desert Islands

Baja California's desert islands shelter endemic species like the spiny-tailed iguana and the black jackrabbit, plus a surprising array of blooms and succulents. Choose from a variety of naturalist-led activities: go birding or beachcombing along the sand, hike through an arroyo lined with massive cardón cacti or climb into a kayak or paddleboard for a closer look at coastal cliffs.

Ready for Recap

This evening's edition of the Daily Recap features a presentation from young travelers in the National Geographic Explorers-in-Training program, who link arms across the lounge to demonstrate the enormity of a humpback whale skeleton.

Evening Entertainment: Local Music and Margaritas

Head up to the sun deck for happy hour margaritas, accompanied by lively tunes from local musicians.

CHANNEL ISLANDS NATIONAL PARK

ABOVE AND BENEATH THE WAVES

A mere 12 miles from Los Angeles, the Channel Islands rank among the most biodiverse places on the planet, home to more than 2,000 species, 145 of them endemic. Here, National Geographic Photographer Rich Reid and Undersea Specialist James Coyer tell the stories of two rare island forests—one terrestrial, the other aquatic—that support the unique wildlife found in the "North American Galápagos."

Inspiration Point, Anacapa Island, California.

TERRESTRIAL TREASURES: TORREY PINES

Award-winning photographer Rich Reid is the director of expedition photography for National Geographic-Lindblad Expeditions. He was a finalist for the BBC Wildlife Photographer of the Year for his time-lapse video documenting forest fire ecology.

My favorite of the Channel Islands is Santa Rosa, which has unique desert landscapes like rolling sand dunes and steep canyons that hold a grove of endemic Torrey Pines—one of two such groves in the world. The Torrey Pines have a magical canopy of twisted branches and a floor covered in needles and cones. On expeditions, guests have lunch in the grove and are often treated to fantastic photo opportunities lit by the sun beaming through the trees.

It's a true privilege to visit this forest. It was once threatened by introduced animals—pigs, cows and elk—but these invasive species were removed a few decades ago, and the conservation efforts have saved native species. For instance, in 2004, there were only 15 endemic island foxes left on Santa Rosa; today, there are close to 2,600. The park service has done a remarkable job preserving this very rare ecosystem.

UNDERWATER WONDERS: KELP FORESTS

Undersea Specialist James Coyer has a Ph.D. in marine biology from the University of Southern California and has spent nearly 50 years researching marine flora, including seaweed and seagrass species.

Jacques Cousteau once said that the Channel Islands were among the most exciting and diverse places that he explored during his diving career. The archipelago has a range of oceanic regions—such as seagrass beds, submarine canyons and rocky reefs—and they determine which species of marine flora can grow. The environmental diversity here supports up to eight species of kelp, and the kelp beds nurture a profusion of life.

Travelers encounter the kelp forests in different ways. Kayaks and Zodiacs bring them right up the kelp canopy that floats on the surface. They then see details of the underwater world—what's beneath that canopy—through the videos that the undersea team produces.

In the marine protected areas, there are bigger fish, all sorts of invertebrates and more of the crustaceans that would normally be harvested. These protected areas are the perfect conservation model for supporting the wonderful world of kelp forests.

NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC EXPLORERS-IN-TRAINING

NURTURE THEIR PASSION FOR THE PLANET

One of the most rewarding sights in Baja California is witnessing the spark of curiosity in a young traveler, whether they're locking eyes with a sea lion while snorkeling or watching a powerful humpback breach the water's surface. Moments like these are especially meaningful when complemented with the learning opportunities in our exclusive National Geographic Explorers-in-Training program.

Led by certified field educators, this hands-on, interactive program teaches kids and teens 18 and under how to explore like scientists and tell the stories of their surroundings through photographs, videos, drawings and more. With a range of activities to choose from, this flexible program encourages young travelers to explore their own interests, whether it's marine biology, geology or photography.

PROGRAM HIGHLIGHTS

Wildlife Watching

Zip across the water in a Zodiac, on the lookout for leaping dolphins and mobula rays, and Baja California's most famous residents: friendly gray whales. Snap photos with your smartphone and jot notes in your official National Geographic Explorers-in-Training Field Notebook.

Microscopic Exploration

Drop a net over the side of your Zodiac to collect plankton, and check it under a video microscope to see how it looks and moves.

Video Shoots

Get tips from your certified photo instructor on how to create impressive slow-motion and timelapse videos, then test out your new skills in the field.

License to Explore

Learn to operate a Zodiac and earn your "driver's license." (Sorry adults, kids only.)

Check Your List

Head to the ship lounge to review the wildlife you saw and mark it in your notebook. Include creatures big and small—whether it's a hummingbird or a humpback whale. Tally your points to keep track of your progress on becoming certified as a National Geographic Explorer-in-Training.

New Friends and Fun Adventures

Meet up with your new friends for fun activities. Depending on the day, it might be a pizza dinner, games in the lounge, a special hike or other surprises.

Eyes to the Night Sky

Head to the top deck to watch the stars come out as the sun goes down. Find and record constellations with the help of your certified field educator.
